John Macansh

Physiotherapist

South East Queensland

John began working as an occupational health consultant when graduating as a Physiotherapist in 2017.

John's role at CWAH involves delivering a range of ergonomic services that include a range of office workstation ergonomic risk assessments, and online work from home assessments .

On top of corporate health work, John also works as a Private Practice Physiotherapist at Central Physio & Health on the Gold Coast.

When not at work, John loves spending time with his family, keeping fit and healthy and travelling.

CWAH Testimonials

"Awesome Manual Handling Training session conducted at our workshop! The training was customised to suit our business and contained a good mix of theory/practical elements. Highly recommended. Thanks again."

"The inner-city business for whom I work as Office Administrator recently engaged CWAH to deliver "Sit Safe" training seminars and conduct ergonomic assessments for all our staff. It was a very worthwhile undertaking. The information imparted in the seminars was interesting and applicable. The individual desk checks were thorough and valuable, as was the subsequent comprehensive report."

"Reps of Corporate Work Health are great at customer service and their responses are prompt and quick. Very accommodating to clients needs and always going above and beyond to find a solution for me and to find a date and time of consultation. Highly recommend them to use for your Ergonomic work health assessments including work from home assessments."
