Preethi Subramaniam

Melbourne northern and western region
Victoria

As an osteopath since 2012 and having completed training as an ergonomic assessor, Preethi possesses a profound understanding of physical ergonomics and its significance in injury prevention and management. She demonstrates a commitment to continuous education and the integration of best ergonomic practices to cultivate a safer and more productive workplace.

Preethi customises recommendations for both individuals and organisations, is proficient in implementing solutions, and communicates effectively to empower employees with the knowledge required to manage and prevent injuries.

Her hobbies reflect her hands-on approach and dedication to enhancing both personal and professional environments. They include undertaking DIY improvements and repairs, as well as volunteering her skills for the community by managing a nonprofit tool library and a 'repair cafe'.

CWHA Testimonials

"The inner-city business for whom I work as Office Administrator recently engaged CWHA to deliver "Sit Safe" training seminars and conduct ergonomic assessments for all our staff. It was a very worthwhile undertaking. The information imparted in the seminars was interesting and applicable. The individual desk checks were thorough and valuable, as was the subsequent comprehensive report."
